

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. However there is a pattern of broadcast decisions made by Sinclair that show clear political partisanship, which violates the implicit agreement between the media and the public.

This is further evidence as to why it is imperative the FCC limit the number of media outlets any one corporation may own.

The FCC should censure Sinclair if they proceed with their current plan to air "Stolen Honor", which is a blatant example of electioneering.
